Incorrect input focus after entering an incorrect code - BUG

Description: When signing in to the site with an email address, you are sent a 6-digit verification code which you are then asked to enter. The code is submitted as soon as you type the 6th digit, and there is no submit button to manually click, therefore, if you enter an incorrect code, you should be able to enter a new code immediately, but you cannot, as the focus for user input is on the last digit rather than the first.
Steps to recreate: Follow steps 1-6 from the above test case, “Sign in with email, incorrect code”
Expected result: Upon entering an incorrect code, the individual digit input fields are cleared and the user is immediately able to enter a new code.
Actual result: Upon entering an incorrect code, the individual digit input fields are closed, but the input focus is on the last digit's input box, requiring the user to manually click the first digit's box in order to start entering a new code.

KAYAK Job Scams

There has been a rise in scammers impersonating companies such as KAYAK, offering fake job opportunities to job seekers. The scammers usually make unsolicited contact with people via Phone, WhatsApp, Instagram, LinkedIn, or email, fraudulently using KAYAK's brand name and logo. The scammers have also referenced KAYAK's executive team members in order to solicit trust in individuals. The scammers offer fake job opportunities and ask people to complete certain steps (such as setting up an online profile or entering personal information) in return for payments/commission. Sometimes the scammers will even pay people a small amount to gain their trust and then ask that person to pay money in order to earn higher commissions.
